

Sam's story

When students are given uniforms that fit well, they feel more comfortable. They don't have to worry about their clothes. They can learn and have fun with their friends.

Sometimes, going to school can feel a little hard.

That's how it felt for Sam.

Sam didn't always have the things needed for school. The shoes didn't fit properly, and the clothes felt uncomfortable. Sometimes, it was hard to see the board, which made learning tricky.

On days like this, Sam felt a bit different from the other students.

But Sam's school cared.

The teachers noticed that something wasn't right, and they quietly stepped in to help.

They contacted State Schools Relief, an organisation that works with schools to make sure students have the things they need.

Before long, things started to change.

Sam was given a clean shirt, a new pair of shoes, and glasses to help see clearly.

Now, Sam felt comfortable walking into class. Learning was easier. Playing with friends felt fun again.

Sam smiled and said, "With my new clothes I'm not cold anymore. And now I can read my books and see things clearly."

Sam didn't have to worry anymore.

Because when students have what they need, they can focus on learning, playing, and being part of their school.

And that's what State Schools Relief is all about, helping every student feel confident, included, and ready to learn.

Students helping students

Students have been helping other students through State Schools Relief for a very long time.

When students raise money, it helps buy important things like uniforms, shoes and school supplies for other students who need them.

You can help too!

When you fundraise, you are helping another student feel happy, confident and ready for school.

When students help other students, it can make a big difference, and help everyone feel like they belong, learn and succeed.
